

TAXATION AND MOBILITY

Call for Papers

August 21-23, 2019
Glasgow, Scotland

The theme of the 2019 congress is Taxation and Mobility.

Taxes influence many economic decisions, such as consumption (of sin goods), work and savings.

Mobility can refer to citizens moving within their home country, often for work-related reasons, or between countries through migration. Mobility also takes place within the income distribution, through the progression over the life cycle or between different generations.

Different policies have been proposed to steer economic behaviour via taxes, to affect mobility across regions and to promote upward income mobility. Moreover, mobility may also influence tax policy by directly affecting the demand for income redistribution and insurance.

The keynote lectures of the conference will address these, and other, issues.

Keynote speeches will be given by:

Rachel Griffith

Professor, University of Manchester and IFS, UK

Nathaniel Hendren

Professor, Harvard University, USA

Jonathan Portes

Professor, King's College London, UK

Stefanie Stantcheva

Professor, Harvard University, USA

Prospective contributors, both practitioners and academics, are invited to submit papers. While the congress theme is "Taxation and Mobility", as is traditional at IIPF congresses, papers on any topic within the field of public economics are welcome.

Papers should be submitted through www.conftool.org/iipf2019.

The deadline for submissions is February 15, 2019.

The papers to be presented at the IIPF Congress will be selected by the Scientific Committee. Submitted papers should include an abstract and keywords. Only completed papers in PDF format will be considered. There are no submission fees for IIPF members. Non-members must pay a submission fee of €20.

Acceptance decisions will be communicated by early April 2019. Authors of accepted papers are required to become members of the IIPF and to confirm their presentation by registering before June 1, 2019. Payment of the annual IIPF membership fee also ensures a reduced registration rate. For more information about IIPF membership please visit www.iipf.org/mbshp.

Selected papers from the 2019 IIPF Congress will be published in a special issue of International Tax and Public Finance. To be considered for publication in this issue, papers must be submitted to the journal by October 15, 2019.

Authors who wish to be considered for the IIPF Young Economists Award, the IIPF Peggy and Richard Musgrave Prize (both for authors under 40 years), or the International Tax and Public Finance PhD Student Prize should indicate this when submitting papers for presentation. More information on the awards is available at www.iipf.org/awards.
